

Bipolar Diathermy for Hemorrhoid

Did you know that millions of people suffer from hemorrhoid? If you have piles, you are not alone. About Fifty percent of the senior citizens in the United States have them, too. Teenage years and children are not safe either especially when they engage in order to poor eating habits (i.e. lots of junk foods). Even popular people have suffered the same discomfort. A good example is Napoleon Bonaparte. It was said that he has been experiencing a lot of pain due to hemorrhoids and cannot ride his horse comfortably during the Battle of Waterloo. George Brett and Former President Jimmy Carter are also known to be prone to piles. Today, one does not have to suffer from a great deal hurting for a long time because there are many drugs and non-surgical treatments like bipolar diathermy for hemorrhoid (also referred to as the illness electrotherapy and BICAP). Most doctors make surgery as the last resort.

The Need for Bipolar Diathermy

Hemorrhoids are seen as a enlarged veins. They bleed most of the time and can inflict severe pain. There are several stages. The first stage demands slight treatments. Some can be even given diet that is more on fiber. The others will require non-operative treatments. With regard to worse cases, the doctors may suggest surgeries that are expensive and painful. This is why many patients look for recommended non-surgical treatments such as bipolar diathermy.

The Procedure

Bipolar diathermy for hemorrhoid uses electric current of very high frequency. The frequency must be high enough to produce heat. The electrical energy is then used to thicken the affected tissues. The heat is applied above the nerves. It is a very easy non-surgical procedure that can be done in the doctor's office or clinic. If the area aches, the doctor may give analgesic.

However, Diathermy is Not for All Stages of Hemorrhoids

They are best used only for internal hemorrhoid. They are great only for small piles and will not work for the big ones. Even if the patient has small clumps of tissues, he or she may need to go through several treatment classes.

Effectiveness

2011, the planet Journal of Gastrointestinal Surgery published and discussed the results of their randomized controlled trial to compare diathermy and closed hemorrhoidectomy using ultrasonic scalpel. The patients have piles including Grade III to be able to IV. The results showed that the diathermy and ultrasound scalpel closed hemorrhoidectomy gives the same degree of pain. The former only appears to be better as it is faster to perform, bloodless, and helps reduce the analgesic requirement because of lower postoperative pain.

Another Study Pioneered by C.P

Hinton and D.L. Morris, the diathermy and also direct current treatment for third degree hemorrhoids were compared. Both treatments were proven to be effective but diathermy had been more convenient since it requires less time.

Millions of men and women suffer from painful masses of tissues in the anus and/or anus but they are lucky which this condition is treatable. There are many options including bipolar diathermy. This non-operative treatment is not completely pain free but it is more quickly than other treatments which includes hemorrhoidectomy and direct current therapy. Bipolar diathermy for hemorrhoid might just require several sessions before one could get rid of all the piles though.
